There’s Plenty of Fish in the Trees

from Ivan: Stories of Old Russia

by Marcus Crouch

- 1 Not all Ivans were silly. Here is a story of one who had his head on the right way round.
- 2 Ivan had a wife who could never keep quiet. Tell her a secret and be sure all her gossips would know it before dinner. He did his best to cure her of her habit, but in vain; her tongue just went on flapping like washing on the line.
- 3 One day Ivan was working in the fields and his spade hit something hard. He felt around with his hands and found that he had struck a chest full of gold coins. He took it home and showed it to his wife.
- 4 “Our fortune’s made,” he said, “But we must be very careful. If the Master hears about it he will surely claim the treasure for himself. After all, it was buried on his land.”
- 5 They thought carefully about where they should hide the gold, and the wife said they should dig a hole in the floor. This is what they did, and Ivan smoothed the surface so that no signs of the treasure were to be seen.
- 6 “Now, my love, whatever you do, say no word of this to one living soul,” said Ivan. “If a whisper of this reaches the Master’s ears we shall be poor again, and he will have me whipped into the bargain.”
- 7 “Trust me,” said his wife. “You know I always keep your secrets safe.”

GO ON ►

- 8 Ivan knew no such thing. He waited until his wife was fast asleep; then he got up, dug up the gold and buried it in the barn, under a great heap of dung.
- 9 Next morning he said to his wife: "Tomorrow we must go into the woods to catch fish."
- 10 "Fish in the woods?" she said. "I never knew that is where you catch them."
- 11 "Why, of course; it's much the best place." And Ivan kept his face very serious indeed.
- 12 While his wife was at the market, he took some fish that he had caught a day or two earlier, together with a dead hare and a basket full of stale cakes from the baker's, and he took them into the woods. When he came home he was empty-handed.
- 13 After they had eaten next morning Ivan took his wife by the hand and they walked to the woods together. Very soon she found a pike dangling from a tree. Next she found a perch and two roaches. She was even more surprised when she came upon a tree which was growing cakes.
- 14 "Look, husband," she said. "Cakes on a tree!"
- 15 "Of course," he said, "everyone knows that's where they grow."
- 16 Now Ivan went down to the river and pulled in his line. On the hook there was a hare.
- 17 "Goodness me!" said the wife. "Just fancy, hare in the river."
- 18 "Quite a good one, too," said Ivan calmly. "Usually they are only half that size."
- 19 He unhooked the hare and put it in his bag. Then they went home with the day's catch. They ate a good dinner that night.
- 20 By now the wife's wagging tongue had made sure that all the village knew about Ivan's treasure. Very soon the news reached the ears of the Master in his big house. He sent for Ivan. The man went to the house, and he took his good wife with him.

- 21 "What is this I hear?" said the Master gravely. "Have you found treasure on my land and not reported it to me?"
- 22 "It's just idle gossip," said Ivan. "There's not a word of truth in it."
- 23 "But your own wife says it is true."
- 24 "Oh, she's a crazy woman," said Ivan. "You can never believe a word she says."
- 25 "That's not true," said the wife. "You know very well that you brought the treasure home."
- 26 "When was that?"
- 27 "Why, it was the day before we caught fish in the woods."
- 28 "What is this?" said the Master. "Fish in the woods?"
- 29 "Yes, Master," said the wife eagerly. "And the very same day we picked cakes off the trees. There were lots of them. Then on the way home my man fished a fat hare out of the river."
- 30 "Take her home," said the Master to Ivan. "You are right. She is a crazy woman."
- 31 Still, the Master was no fool. He sent his men to the cottage when Ivan was out. They dug up the floor and searched high and low, but no treasure could they find. Ivan spent it coin by coin in the market, and it kept them in comfort for many years.
