2018 Released Items: Grade 5 Literary Analysis Task

The Literary Analysis Task requires students to read two literary texts that are purposely paired. Students read the texts, answer questions for each text and for the texts as a pair, and then write an analytic essay.

The 2018 blueprint for grade 5 Literary Analysis Task includes Evidence-Based Selected Response/Technology-Enhanced Constructed Response items as well as one Prose Constructed Response prompt.

Included in this document:
• Answer key and standards alignment
• PDFs of each item with the associated text(s)

Additional related materials not included in this document:
• Sample scored student responses with annotations and practice papers
• Scoring Rubric for Prose Constructed Response Items
• Guide to English Language Arts/Literacy Released Items: Understanding Scoring
• English Language Arts/Literacy Assessment: General Scoring Rules for the 2015 Summative Assessment

Today, you will read two passages. After you have read the passages and answered the questions, you will be asked to compose a written response analyzing the themes or topics.

Read the passage from The Wanderer. Then answer the questions.

_from The Wanderer_

_by Sharon Creech_

1. The sea, the sea, the sea. It rolled and rolled and called to me. Come in, it said, come in.

2. And in I went, floating, rolling, splashing, swimming, and the sea called, Come out, come out, and further I went but always it swept me back to shore.

3. And still the sea called, Come out, come out, and in boats I went—in rowboats and dinghies and motorboats, and after I learned to sail, I flew over the water, with only the sounds of the wind and the water and the birds, all of them calling, Sail on, sail on.

4. And what I wanted to do was go on and on, across the sea, alone with the water and the wind and the birds, but some said I was too young and the sea was a dangerous temptress, and at night I dreamed a terrible dream. A wall of water, towering, black, crept up behind me and hovered over me and then down, down it came, but always I awoke before the water covered me, and always I felt as if I were floating when I woke up.

5. I am not always such a dreamy girl, listening to the sea calling me. My father calls me Three-sided Sophie: one side is dreamy and romantic; one is logical and down-to-earth; and the third side is hardheaded and impulsive. He says I am either in dreamland or earthland or mule-land, and if I ever get the three together, I’ll be all set, though I wonder where I will be then. If I’m not in dreamland or earthland or mule-land, where will I be?

6. My father says my logical side is most like him, and the dreamy side most like my mother, which isn’t entirely fair, I don’t think. My father likes to think of himself as a logical man, but he is the one who pores over pictures of exotic lands and says things like “We should go on a safari!” and “We should zip through the air in a hot-air balloon!”

7 And although my mother is a weaver and spins silky cloths and wears flowing dresses, she is the one who gives me sailing textbooks and makes me study water safety and weather prediction and says things like “Yes, Sophie, I taught you to sail, but that doesn’t mean I like the idea of you being out there alone on the water. I want you to stay home. Here. With me. Safe.”

8 My father says he doesn’t know who my hardheaded mule side resembles. He says mules don’t run in the family.

9 I am thirteen, and I am going to sail across the ocean. Although I would like to go alone—alone! alone! flying over the water!—I’m not. My mule-self begged a place aboard a forty-five-foot sailboat with a motley crew: three uncles and two cousins. The uncles—Stew, Mo, and Dock—are my mother’s brothers, and she told them, “If the slightest harm comes to my Sophie, I’ll string you all up by your toes.”

10 She isn’t worried (although maybe she should be) about the influence of my cousin Brian—quiet, studious, serious Brian—but she frets over the bad habits I might learn from my other cousin, Cody. Cody is loud, impulsive, and charming in a way my mother does not trust. “He’s too charming,” she says, “in a dangerous sort of way.”

11 My mother isn’t the only person who is not thrilled for me to take this trip. My uncles Stew and Mo tried their best to talk me out of it. “It’s going to be a bunch of us guys, doing guy things, and it wouldn’t be a very pleasant place for a girl,” and “Wouldn’t you rather stay home, Sophie, where you could have a shower every day?” and “It’s a lot of hard work,” and yakkety-yak they went. But I was determined to go, and my mule-self kicked in, spouting a slew of sailing and weather terms, battering them over the head with all the things I’d learned in my sailing books, and with some things I’d made up, for good measure.
12 Uncle Dock—the good uncle, I call him, because he’s the one who doesn’t see any harm in my coming—said, “Heck, she knows more about boats than Brian and Cody put together,” and so they caved in.

13 There are two other reasons my mother has not tied me to my bed and refused to let me go. The first is that Uncle Dock gave her an extensive list of the safety precautions aboard the boat, which include a satellite navigator, the Global Positional System. The second reason, not a very logical one, but one that somehow comforts my mother, is that Bompie is on the other side of the ocean. We will end up in Bompie’s arms, and she wishes she could join us just for that moment.

14 Bompie is my grandfather—my mother’s father, and also Uncle Dock, Stew, and Mo’s father.

Read the passage from Evangeline Mudd and the Golden-Haired Apes of the Ikkinasti Jungle. Then answer the questions.

from Evangeline Mudd and the Golden-Haired Apes of the Ikkinasti Jungle

by David Elliott

1. Evangeline grabbed the trapeze with both hands and pumped her legs. Within seconds the trapeze was swinging back and forth like the pendulum on a grandfather clock. Without a word from her mother or father, she grabbed the trapeze hanging directly in front of her with one hand and let go of the first trapeze with the other. In the wink of an eye, she was brachiating around the room like crazy.

2. Have you guessed what brachiate means yet? Yes! It’s how gorillas and orangutans and chimpanzees and lots of primates, including the golden-haired ape of the Ikkinasti Jungle, get around—by swinging on vines and branches from tree to tree. It’s a blast! (But don’t try it without a net.)

3. “Wheeeeee,” called Evangeline as she zipped over and around her parents. “Watch this!”

4. And letting go with both hands she did a somersault before she grabbed the next trapeze.

5. “She’s a natural,” her father said proudly as he watched Evangeline whiz around the room.

6. “It’s like she’s done it all her life,” Magdalena added.

7. In truth, Evangeline had brachiated before. She had been secretly practicing in the tall trees that surrounded the cozy bungalow. You mustn’t think that this was any kind of naughtiness on her part. It was instead the natural result of her upbringing. You see, golden-haired apes teach their children to trust their own instincts. If they didn’t, how would the young apes ever survive in such a perilous place as the Ikkinasti Jungle? Since Evangeline had been raised like a golden-hair, when she realized that she was strong enough to brachiate, she naturally took to the trees. Wouldn’t you have if you had been raised in such a way?
“Come on up!” she called out to her parents, “It’s lovely!”

The girl did not have to wait long for her parents to join her, and before you could spell prehensile, Evangeline and her mother and her father were flying through the upper air of the bungalow. Once Evangeline even surprised herself by flying out of the living-room window, making a one-hundred-and-eighty-degree turn, and grabbing the trapeze closest to the window in the dining room.

Magdalena, herself an expert brachiator, followed right along behind her.

“Life is perfect!” the girl shouted through her laughter. “Absolutely perfect!”

And for a moment, time seemed to stand still as the whole world sang out in answer. Yes! Yes! It is perfect!

But if you had been there, you might have heard a hint of melancholy in that answer, too, for by revolving on its axis day after day, year after year, century after century, it was as if the world had learned that perfection is a fleeting thing and does not last forever.

Glossary Definition

perilous = dangerous

5. Part A
